"making childhood dreams come wedding day true."

Savvy Couples Engage Technology; Free Wedding Websites

Because many brides and grooms are technically savvy and fully fledged into the evolution of the Internet and other sophisticated tools of communication, i.e., social mediums like Facebook, Twitter and MySpace, they are also incorporating these tools into their weddings. A great, cost-effective method that is readily available to brides and grooms is the use of free wedding websites that are offered all over the Internet. The Knot, Wedding Wire and countless other wedding Internet sites make this free tool available at the click of a button. What's even better is that these websites don't require sophisticated computer backgrounds or highly skilled levels of knowledge to use. They are user friendly; beginners can breeze through the setup instructions and use the templates to produce a beautiful wedding website.

What is needed to get started is "correct information" from your upcoming event; specifically decide important facts that need and should be shared with the general public. Facts that should be included in your website include: Your Story as a Couple; Accommodations & Directions; Reception Information; Gift Registry and a Section for the Wedding Party. This is a great way to keep your wedding participants informed of upcoming events and deadlines for certain tasks related to the wedding. Keep in mind that your website will be published to the cyberspace world and will be accessible by the general public. Be cautious in what is shared because once the information has been launched, incorrect information can (will) cause confusion and possible embarrassment. Please make sure that it is also grammatically correct! Whew! This is a marvelous and beautiful tool to share with all of your family and friends that will provide updates and continuous information right up to your wedding day; other couples surfing the Internet will also come across your wedding website.

Remember that image is EVERYTHING and your wedding website will be a full reflection of who you are as a couple and it will set the tone for events to come. Be the example and set the standard; tasteful and chic elegance is to be admired. A lack of organization in content and presentation on your website will simply appear as an organized mess!

You want your wedding memories to be remembered; for "elegant" and successful reasons! Spiced Elegance awaits
